SUMMARY.

The reports of the fighting at the Dardanelles reveal many stories of death and courage. The Turkish losses were enormous. The Australian troops, in their bayonet rushes, effected great slaughter. The Red Cross Brigade worked magnificently. The ambulance drivers were continuously under fire.

The Turks made a dead set against them, and shot them down mercilessly.

It has been established that the Turks used dum-dum bullets.

The Turks, considerably reinforced, attacked the Allies' camp at Critha, but were repulsed, leaving 1500 dead.

The bombardment by the first continues, their guns annihilated an entire Turkish regiment.

The German Embassy at Constantinople admitted that the Allies have occupied several parts of the Peninsula.

Two Turkish aeroplanes dropped bombs over the waters of Sed el Bahr without doing any harm.

The warships brought down both machines, and shot down the German aircraft.

There is a great concentration of German troops at Beersheba, and the British are making a determined effort to reach it.

The British left Critha on Tuesday evening. French artillery took the enemy on the flank, inflicting serious losses.

The Germans gained a footing at Hill 60, but were driven off by the British.

The enemy made a feeble attack east of Critha, which was easily repulsed.

The British are making considerable progress south of Critha, representing a gain of over 1000 yards.

The Allies gained a marked success east of Critha, which was easily repulsed.

The Ever-ready Home Healer.

IN the course of her duties the Nurse is brought into contact with patients who have suffered from a variety of skin injury and complaint. She is also brought to fully realise the need for a reliable healing balm which can be applied to diseased and wounded skin with every confidence that only good will result.

The fact that hundreds of nurses daily use Zam-Buk in the course of their professional duties is further proof, that in Zam-Buk the public is furnished with a safe and reliable healing balm and skin-cure, the purity and power of which cannot be denied. Zam-Buk is not only a powerful skin-healer. It is strongly antiseptic and germicidal, and so forms the ideal protection for the skin against disease germs. Below we quote the opinion of four of the many trained and qualified nurses who have written in praise of Zam-Buk.

NURSE NEAVES, of 12 Poplar-street, Surry Hill, Sydney, says—

SUBMARINES. TRAWLERS SUNK. NINE MORE VICTIMS.

LONDON, May 6. Submarines of the new type continue to attack trawlers in the North Sea. One of the submarines sank seven trawlers. Another sank two trawlers. One trawler, the Bob White, was sunk by shell fire in attempting to pick up the torpedoed trawlers. In some cases the victims were turned adrift in their boats, and were provided only with black bread.

UPPER TOLL.

The commander of the U24 boasted to the crew of a trawler that he had destroyed fishing vessels valued at £150,000 since Sunday.

UNITED STATES.

NOTE TO GERMANY.

NEW YORK, May 6. The United States Note declares Germany's responsibility in leaving the amount of reparations for the capture of American vessels to a Prize Court.

The Note, which is couched in temperate terms, declares that the William Feyer's destruction was an unquestionable violation of the Treaty with Prussia.

REPRISAL POLICY.

REVERSAL SUGGESTED.

PRISONERS' COMPLAINTS.

LONDON, May 6. Lord Robert Cecil, in the House of Commons last night, quoted letters from officers bitterly complaining of their treatment in Germany. He said that the Government and the Emperor, in retaliation for the treatment of submarine prisoners, the German officials to relate their experiences.

Lord Robert Cecil hoped that Mr. Asquith would persist in his intention to exact reparation at the end of the war, however high-placed the criminals were.

Mr. Asquith reiterated his previous pledge.

Mr. Bonar Law, referring to the German methods of warfare, hoped we would disregard any convention preventing us from effective dealing with enemies aboveboard.

We might, he added, without loss of national dignity, reverse the policy with regard to submarine officers and crews. If everything failed to bring redress, we might confiscate all German property with in the Empire.

LESS COTTON.

GERMAN IMPORTATIONS.

LONDON, May 6. In the House of Commons today the Hon. Neil Trevelyan, replying to a question, said that he had every reason to believe that the figures for April showed a great diminution in the importation of cotton into Germany.

MERCHANT SHIPPING.

LONDON, May 6. The steamer Den of Ogd, which left Newcastle on February 1, and Sydney on February 17, for London and Liverpool, has arrived at London.

The steamer Acadia, which left Port Pirie on March 10, for Middlesbrough and London, has arrived at London.

The ship Neosho, which left Newcastle on February 25, has reached Liverpool.

The ship Ben Lee, which left Newcastle on March 2, has arrived at London.

WAR NOTES.

THE YPRES REGION.

It is clear from the official despatches of the past couple of days that the British have done to draw to their line towards Ypres on the north-east and south-east of that town. It is explained that at some points it has been necessary to the French line, and that order to conform to a redoubtable line, and at some other the withdrawal has been due to the German's persistent use of poisonous gas. Whatever the reason, the fact remains, that the line has been gained much more, and that they have lost since the beginning of the recent great offensive. They are apparently almost throughout the whole of the Ypres region, and their immediate object seems to be the taking of that town. The pressure, the German are now exerting on the Allied line, there is every indication that they are concentrating a big force behind their present line. The object of making the line so strong is to smash a way through to the coast. It is hardly possible that they will be able to bring this about, but it is a very serious situation. The German are now exerting on the Allied line, there is every indication that they are concentrating a big force behind their present line. The object of making the line so strong is to smash a way through to the coast. It is hardly possible that they will be able to bring this about, but it is a very serious situation.

FIGHTING AN OUTLAW.

This use of poisonous gas by the Germans has become one of the most serious features of the western campaign, and it is clear that the Allies will be forced to fight the war on a wholly new basis. The idea is a very simple one, but it is a very serious one. The German are now exerting on the Allied line, there is every indication that they are concentrating a big force behind their present line. The object of making the line so strong is to smash a way through to the coast. It is hardly possible that they will be able to bring this about, but it is a very serious situation.

BECKFORTH HONOUR ROLL.

A public meeting was held at Beckforth to erect a memorial to the fallen soldiers of the 1st Battalion, The Buffs, who were killed in the attack on the village of Beckforth on April 22, 1915.

AUSTRALIA'S ENTRY INTO THE WAR.

There seems to be a disposition in some quarters to take a somewhat pessimistic view of the first fighting in which our troops took part.

RECRUITING. PROFESSIONAL MEN ENLIST.

RUSH TO VOLUNTEER.

"Still they come!" That is the daily cry at the recruiting office, and yesterday proved no exception to the rule. The manhood of New South Wales answered the call, and the "unlimited supply of recruits" recently referred to by the Minister for Defence appeared to be no idle boast in view of the hundreds of young men who came to the recruiting office yesterday.

At the conclusion of yesterday's work at the barracks the enrolling officer expressed satisfaction at the fine class of men who were coming forward. "Of course," he said, "nearly all the trades were represented, but it is wonderful to see the number of professional men enlisting for their civilian occupations to serve in the military forces. Not only are many professional men enlisting, but there is now a steady stream of those who state on their application forms that they are of independent means. Men of these classes set a fine example, because as a rule they are doing up a comfortable income and an easy life for a life to face with war. It is very gratifying to see in the pitiless light of intimate facts that let no room for illusion. Possibly that terrible introduction for the moment left some of the men who had been so recently and peculiarly susceptible to depressing influences.

THE CASUALTIES.

As regards the casualties we need to remember the losses the European wars of record, and especially need to glance back over the toll that has been taken in this particular war, and above all, we need to dismiss the casualties of the Boer war as being of a different order. It is an enormous judgment upon what has happened, and is happening, at the Dardanelles. The close fighting of the day, with the scientific weapons at the command of the offensive, means that the casualties are much heavier, no victory can be won except at considerable cost. No commander in the field expects to defeat the enemy without the loss of his own men. It is a battle to be won at a price, and it is a price to be paid for victory, and if a commander, an army, or a country is prepared to pay that price, then it is well that they should have war.
